

Supply Chain Manager

Do you want to be part of a fantastic growth journey where you play a key role in executing the strategy? We are a young, dynamic company with focus on offering prescription speciality and branded medicines in the Scandinavian markets. We are scaling for growth and have an increasing portfolio of registrations and planned launches. This is a role where you will have direct influence on the business, be in close contact with partners and internal functions. You will be responsible for the supply chain in Scandinavia and manage the network of suppliers, wholesalers and customers.

The position is a key role and besides reporting to the CEO, you will also be part of the management team.

About the job

As Head of supply chain you will be involved in the commercial strategy for our products. You will be involved in managing the network of suppliers and wholesalers. You will own the S&OP process and together with Sales and Marketing define the demand and supply planning which is translated to orders and management of logistics. As our supply chain manager, you will be involved in a variety of tasks ensuring timely and efficient supply to customers. You are responsible for

- S&OP process – from planning to managing the stock
- Manage suppliers, distributors and wholesalers
- Arranging logistics, importation and re-packaging
- Coordinate serialisation and packaging materials
- Launch planning and managing in-market stock

You will also be responsible for building the necessary systems and structures within your area to ensure efficient and compliant processes. You will ensure that we always are inspection ready and in compliance with regards to GDP and other relevant codes.

About you

We expect you hold a relevant education at bachelor level and experience from a similar role managing a pharmaceutical supply chain. You are open minded and honest, have a good sense of humour and a positive outlook on life. You are creative and able to work in fast paced environment managing multiple tasks simultaneously and with the fact that there are constantly new tasks and deadlines that must be met. You manage to work detail-oriented and hands-on when required and at the same time maintain an overview of the whole and keeping a good structure.

We expect that you have experience from supply chain management in the Scandinavian markets and speak one of the languages.

Who are we?

You will join an exciting company with high growth ambitions. We want to make a difference by offering treatment solutions within areas like oncology, rare diseases and neurology.

You will be part of a growing team, where we treasure a can-do-attitude, solution-oriented thinking and close collaboration. We work closely together to ensure high performance and the best service to customers. At Newbury Pharmaceuticals, we have an open atmosphere and work as one team to achieve our goals. We are based in Lund, Sweden – and expect you to be regularly in the office combined with the possibility of hybrid-working.

About Newbury Pharmaceuticals

We are a young, dynamic and ambitious company which has built a solid foundation of internal systems and a strong pipeline. We are now ready to take the next step on our growth journey where we will commercialise a number of medicines and make further advancement of the portfolio by finalising registrations and by adding new in-licensing opportunities.

We offer

We offer modern offices in Lund, Sweden and the possibility for hybrid working. We are moving from being a start-up to scaling the business for growth. You will have the opportunity to join this exciting journey and build an even stronger focus on supply chain management as the business engine.

Applications will be reviewed on a continuous basis and please submit your resume and short motivation at: HR@newburypharma.com
